Business has bright idea to help save our forests

A sustainable business has launched a range of eco-friendly lighting.

Luminair, based in Temple Street, Brighton, uses energy-efficient LEDs and recycled and sustainable materials from local sources.

The Luminair Eco range is made from wooden shades and stands from responsibly managed forests and manufactured by local wood-turners.

A recent report from the International Energy Agency said that without urgent action, the amount of energy used for lighting would be 80 per cent higher in 2030.

It also said that the electricity used by lighting is a major source of CO2 emissions, equivalent to 70 per cent of those from the world's cars.

LED lighting has a 100,000- hour lifetime.
